

2017 Affordable Health Insurance Options for Uninsured Rhode Islanders

The type of health insurance available to you and your family depends on your income. Adults with income below 138% of the Federal Poverty Level (FPL) may be eligible for RItte Care/Medicaid. The RItte Care/Medicaid income limits for children, parents and pregnant women are higher.

Individuals and families with income above the RItte Care/Medicaid limits can buy coverage through Health Source RI (HSRI). Tax credits are available to help pay for coverage if income is below 400% FPL and if income is less than 250% FPL you can also get help paying for out-of-pocket costs (cost-sharing reduction).

Parents with children enrolled in RItte Care who have family income below 175% FPL can receive state premium assistance to help pay the cost of a HSRI plan. Finally, youth who were in foster care in Rhode Island and had RItte Care when they turned 18 are eligible for RItte Care coverage until they turn 26. There is no income limit for these young adults.

The chart on the back shows the applicable income limits for each family size. You don't need to figure out which coverage you qualify for. You submit an application through HealthSource RI and the system will figure it out. There is more information on the back about applying for coverage and enrolling in a plan.
